under the new administration. The final session, now ending, has witnessed a struggle in the senate between republicans and democrats, that prevented the confirmation of the greater part of President Taft's appointments. With more than 2,000 appointments before the senate, democrats declined to permit action on the great majority, and the result will be that President - Wilson will fill the places after he comes into office.

This factional struggle, coupled with the internal democratic contests for the organization and control of senate and house under the new administration, injected the political equation into the last session's work to an unusual degree. Several bills that might have become law in the closing days of this session have been held back because democratic leaders preferred to have the subjects carried over until a democratic president, senate and house can have an opportunity to carry out definite legislative programs. Important actions in the short session just closing include: "Literacy test" immigration bill passed, but vetopd by President Taft. Single six-year presidential term amendment passed by senate. Life prisoners in federal made eligible to parole. Five-year closed season for fur-seals incorporated in the international seal Federal control of water powers da-feated in the senate. Manufacturers of foods required to state the net weight and contents on outside of food package. Government authorized by law to selze trust-controlled goods as soon to have had d as imported into the United States

$2,000,000. MEASURES VETOED.

The democratic majority that took control of the house when the congress organized insisted on going ahead with other features of tariff revision, and passed wool, cotton, free list and some other bills. All three measures with the aid of the progressive republican forces in the senate, reached President Taft. They were vetoed on the ground that the tariff board was conducting investigations, the results of which must be known before a proper revision of the tariff could be made.

Legislative work throughout the special session, and the long session beginning in December, 1911, and running through last August, included the following: Increase in the size of the house of representatives, from 296 and 435 members. Age and service pension law, increasing civil war pensions. Eight-hour law covering government
